BOSTON, March 7.

By the English ship Nelly, captain Eken, in 45 days from Liverpool, we have English accounts to the 16th Jan. and French to the 12th. The annexed extracts are from a file of the Courier received by us.

PARIS, JAN. 12.

The triumph of the royalists in the Chamber of Deputies on Saturday last, relative to the banishment of the Regicides, has given universal satisfaction. I am assured that the king was highly pleased and gratified by the sentiments of loyalty and attachment manifested by the deputies on this occasion. The eloquent and chivalrous speech of the count Bethisy, is the subject of universal conversation and praise. When at the termination of it, he exclaimed—Vive le Roi, quand meme, the crash of applause was so violent as it were, to shake the very palace to its foundation. Such long and reiterated and enthusiastic plaudits I never heard.

A commissioner is to be appointed to ascertain the individuals, who, being attained as Regicides by the provisions of article 7 of the amnesty law, will be banished in perpetuity from the kingdom.

The law of Annesty, as amended in the chamber of deputies, so as to inflict banishment on the Regicides, passed 93 to 32; and in the house of peers, without discussion, by the votes of 120 to 21.

The Regicides must leave France in one month from the passing of the law; and are not to return, under the penalty of death.

Upon this subject we remain of the opinion we expressed some days ago.—There are said to be about 16 remaining. Fouche and Cambaceres are included in that number, and one of the members of the chamber of deputies.

On the 27th of last month, the English evacuated the barrack of Mount Blanc. They still occupy that of the Rue-de-Faubourg-Poissonniere, and some villages to the north of Paris, as well as the heights of Montmatre. Those of St. Chaumont are no longer garrisoned.—The barriers of Paris have been delivered to the national guard, except those of St. Denais, de la Courtille, &c. which the English still occupy.

The merchants of Vienna have presented a memorial to the emperor of Austria, praying, that as Austria is now possessed of a very extensive sea coast, the introduction of colonial produce by land, may be prohibited. This would greatly promote the prosperity of Trieste Fiume and Venice.

It appears that Fouche will be joined by several of his old revolutionary colleagues in his exile, as I understand it is intended to issue a decree of perpetual banishment from the kingdom against four marshals, viz. Soult, Suchet, Massena and another, whose name I cannot recollect.

LONDON, Jan. 12.

THE CORPSE OF MURAT.

Our readers have been informed by an extract from a late French Journal, that Madame Murat had applied to the Austrian cabinet, imploring its intercession with the court of Naples, to allow her to obtain the body of her husband. By the subjoined letter, brought by the last mail from Naples, it will be seen that all interference of this kind would now be in vain:

" NAPLES, DEC. 5.

"A scene ensued last week at Pizza, in Calabria, which would disgrace the most uncivilized hordes of barbarous savages. The inhabitants of Pizza, the place where Murat was tried and shot, influenced by the demoniac spirit of revenge, or some evil propensity, determined to dig again from the grave, the mutilated remains of their former king, for the purpose of burning them. The Syndic of the town, who, very properly, unwilling to sanction the passions of the mob, stimulated in so disgraceful a manner, expostulated with them, and endeavored to dissuade from so barbarous an act—exasperated at even an attempt to dissuade them from an act which only the genios of evil could have suggested, they murdered the unfortunate Syndic, and dragging the body of Murat from the silent grave, they committed it to the flames with that of the ill-fated Syndic.

"The present court treats Englishmen with less attention than ever, and the disgust excited by the treatment received by lord Bentinck, has caused many families to winter in Rome and Florence, who intended to come here."

BELFAST, Jan. 12.

Extraordinary fall of guineas.—It is a singular fact, that notwithstanding so much has been said about the depreciation of bank notes, a gentleman yesterday went upon Belfast change, and could not obtain English bank notes, for guineas, except at a discount.

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 20.

Madame Lavalette.—Extract of a letter from Paris, Jan. 5, "Madame Lavalette still continues in the Conciergerie, au secret.—Her physician is not allowed to visit her. She is in the last stage of illness. Were she to perish in the jail in which she is now confined, though not one of those acquainted with her, could by any means attribute it to any severity she may have experienced since the night of her husband, yet it is not less true, that its effects on the public would be greatly to be dreaded—it would be difficult to attach blame to any one. In ordinary times, Madame Lavalette would not have been treated so rigorously—but scarcely a day elapses without the ministry being greeted with reproaches on this subject—no one ventures to interfere, and the moral relaxation of the penal code, which on other occasions, not a minister but would take on his own responsibility, thus, does not operate in favr of this lady. Lavalette, himself, has certainly passed through Brussels—his friends have affirmed, publicly, that he is already in safety in Bavaria.

The new crusade.—The knights of the different orders, and the persons who have subscribed their names to contribute towards the formation of the funds necessary to abolish the trade in white and black slaves in the north of Africa, a trade still carried on contrary to religion, humanity, and the honor of christianity, are informed that the president of the association, will have the honor to make his annual report on the progress made towards the attainment of the end proposed—he will explain to them, at the same time, the state of the funds given in trust, to his management for this service, by the sovereigns and other illustrious subscribers, and will submit to them the documents on which the report is founded. The first report will be presented at Paris, at a time and place to be specified, when his most christian majesty, who has deigned to subscribe as grand master of the order of St. Louis, shall have made known his pleasure on this head.

(Signed) W. SIDNEY SMITH,
President of the knights, liberators of the white slaves in America.

P. S. The subscribers will receive printed copies of the papers, subsequent to the first association at Vienna, on the 29th of Dec. last.

We noticed yesterday, the enthusiastic and almost unanimous cordiality with which the French chamber of deputies voted the expulsion of the assassins of Louis XVI. Strange as it may appear, it is nevertheless true, that out of a number of men, not less than 370, all in the prime of life in 1793, only 16 are now alive to receive their punishment. Of these, only five have been conspicuous characters of late years; the eleven minor traitors have wisely covered their sanguinary heads with the veil of obscurity, and have thus escaped that execrable notoriety which their fellow criminals seem to have courted. The five worthies who are most known to the present generation, are Cambaceres, Carnot, Fouche, Barere, and Garat. The respective biographies of the three former are well known to our readers;—Barrere and Garat have been comparatively forgotten—we shall remind our readers who they are. Barrere was successively a member of the constituent assembly, and of the national convention. Under Robespierre, he was the orator of the committee of public safety, in which capacity he acquitted himself so well, and displayed jacobinical principles so pure, that his speeches were denominated the real carmagnoles. He was president of the convention, or mock tribunal, which sentenced Louis XVI. to death. Subsequently he was accused of deserting the sacred cause of liberty and equality, and declared by the national convention forever ineligible to any public function. From the period of Bonaparte's accession to power, nothing was heard of Barrere until June, 1815, when he was returned as one of Bonaparte's chamber of deputies, and had a solitary vote (probably his own) for the truly honorable office of president of that august body. During the usurpation, he wrote several articles in favor of Bonaparte's government, in various journals, and under assumed names.

Garat has been rather more actively employed than Barrere. It was he who headed the deputation of cut throats, who announced to the unfortunate sovereign, that he was to perish on a scaffold. On this occasion, Garat conducted himself with so much insolence, that even his unfeeling followers, particularly Hebert, remonstrated with him on the subject. In 1792 & '93, Garat was minister of justice, and of course it came to his lot to supply the guillotine with victims. How well he executed the task, may be guessed from a favorite jacobin song, composed at the time, in which the names of Garat, Carra, Marat, were introduced as a chorus!

Garat contrived to retain his office under the successive factions of the Girondists and the Mountaineers; and strange as it may appear, was still the orator at whose fiat his various masters, Brissot, Danton, Robespierre, &c. were put to death! After a few years of obscurity, Garat contrived, in 1795, to be elected one of the council of five hundred. In that year he went to Italy as commissioner, and shared in the plunder of Rome. In 1799, he was brought into Bonaparte's conservative senate, and acted as a kind of mouth piece of the tyrant in that body, until his downfal. In 1814, Garat signed the manifesto which he declared that Bonaparte had forfeited the throne and recalled the Bourbons. In 1815, he was first to hail the return of his old master from Elba, and after the battle of Waterloo he bawled most lustily, in the chamber of representatives, for Napoleon the second.

Garat's private fortune, which we fear is beyond the reach of confiscation, but which was altogether amassed from the confiscations of the revolution, far exceeds two millions of livres. He is now at least 60 years of age; his countenance of a pale sallow, and gibbet-looking hue. He will probably make off for America; we wish Mr. Madison joy of his society. If the following anecdote accompanies him, however, we doubt not that even an American stomach will rise at the sight of Monsieur Garat: In 1796, a female presented herself before the French minister of police at Paris, (M. Cochon) and made oath that she was the sister of Garat, had lived seven years with him as his mistress, and had borne four children to him, which were by his orders drowned in the Seine, a few hours after birth! Garat very prudently bought off this calumniator, for with the exception of the affidavit to the above effect, the police records of the French capital contain no further information on the subject.

It is now strongly reported, that the British troops are falling back upon Paris. Orders have been given, in several of the villages about the capital, to prepare for the English the quarters already occupied by them. The month of January has been long looked to by the parisians as pregnant with some extraordinary event; any public occurrence of the least importance, or in any degree indicative of a revolutionary movement, is enquired into with anxious curiosity, and the consequence is, that the most alarming, but in general the most extravagant rumours are afloat every day.—Even the terror of the law against the propagation of seditious rumours is not sufficient to restrain the public curiosity and credulity of the French.

"This design is even looked upon as having disclosed itself in the violent spirit that has broken out in the chamber of deputies; the reported return of the British troops is attributed to the king's fears from this quarter. The palace of the Thuilleries is strongly guarded;—there are at least 400 men, cavalry and infantry, of the new army, barracked round the palace: but the only quarter from which real danger appears, is from the revolutionary party.

"There are no longer Bonapartists and republicans; they have formed a coalition, and openly call themselves—"The admirers of the revolution." The general distinction of political opinion, is royalists and ami de la revolution.—This party was active and daring, even under Bonaparte, and is now strengthened by the accession of his adherents.—The French government it is said, has already discovered a system of affiliation amongst them. They instantly recognize each other by signs, like the freemasons, and are sworn to secrecy. One of the watch-words is said to be—le lion endormi.

"So extensively has this system spread, that it had reached even the barracks, where it was discovered even by the government. It is, in consequence of this discovery, that a great number of French officers have been arrested within the last few days. Paris is still as full of French military as ever.—Scarcely any of the officers who served Bonaparte have been received into the new army; they are to be seen wandering about in all quarters, wearing the red ribbon of the legion of honor; they look at the officers of the royal army with envious derision. The latter have as yet scarcely acquired the air of soldiers, and they are, for the most part, from the provinces.

"Nothing has been lately heard of Lavalette. A very humorous caricature of his escape is privately circulated; it represents him escaping in a grotesque female disguise, too palpable to conceal him, and followed by a dog, holding a stick in its mouth, with a lantern at both ends. The dog is called Un chien Barbe, and intended to represent Barbe Marbois, the minister of justice, whose connivance is represented by the two lanterns, by which he lights the prisoner through the passages of the Conciergerie."

To capt. Gillender, of the fast sailing ship Integrity, the editors of the Gazette are indebted for London and Liverpool papers to the first ultimo, from which they have made such extracts as they afford.

The Niger frigate, with Mr. Bagot on board, sailed from Portsmouth for America on the 28th of January.

Madame Lavalette, having obtained her provisional liberty by furnishing the security required by law, has been released from prison.

The 66th regiment sailed from Portsmouth on the 26th of Jan. for St. Helena.

Letters of the 25th ult. mention the arrival of the emperor Alexander at St. Petersburg, which occasioned there, great rejoicings. On his majesty's birthday, the utmost degree of splendor was exhibited. The ball and the illuminations were superb. The prince of Orange and the prince of Wirtemberg were present.

Jan. 13.

In pursuance of a proposition submitted to the king, by the minister at war, Massena: Jourdan, Souchet, Davoust and Moncey, are deprived of their pay. Yesterday there was a rumor that M. de Talleyrand was exiled.

Jan. 15.

There was an error in the names of the marshals, which I am pleased to find having been deprived of their pay: they are marshals Massena, Souchet, Suchet, Moreau and Lefevre, Davoust has received an order to quit Paris in 24 hours; and Serrurier has been put upon half pay. One hundred and seventy general officers have been cashiered: the minister at war announcing this decision to the chamber stated that it had been determined upon because they had checked the spring of legitimacy.

Jan. 17.

Many arrests have taken place within the last 24 hours at Paris. Gen. Grundler, late gov. of Paris, and reporter of the military commission, convoked by marshal Ney, is it is said, of the number. Marshal Serrurier has hitherto eluded the searches of the police. The ultra royalists themselves cannot cite any overt act, while on the other hand it must be acknowledged the conduct of almost all the ancient chiefs of the army is mysterious and menacing: not one appears at court, and it is whispered they hold private conferences, the nature of which is highly calculated to awaken suspicion.

In addition to the arrestations I announced this morning, I have to add the names of generals Morgan and Marchand. The measure with respect to the latter caused some surprise: General Marchand, was the officer who commanded the town of Grenoble at the return of Napoleon, and who remained inaccessible to fear and corruption.

In the mean time the political hemisphere becomes hourly more gloomy;—you see marked on the countenances of some, a trifling feeling of hate, of contempt, and vengeance; on that of others a profound dread, accompanied with other signs, which, in the estimation of those accustomed to watch the direct changes of the revolution, have ever been the precursors of evil hours. The more prudent part of the court have taken the alarm: already the duke of Wellington reinforces his small garrison with 25,000 additional British troops, and the day of his departure is yet remote, while the fortifications of Montmatre have been augmented.

By a royal oedinance of Louis, dated Jan. 17, all the individuals named in art. 2, in the ordinance of July 24th last, are retained upon the list included in the said article; and, shall be bound to quit the kingdom by the 28th of Feb. and cannot re-enter it without the king's permission.

THE VOLCANO.

From the Java, Government Gazette of May 20, 1815.

We are at length enabled to give the public a full and interesting account of the Volcanic eruption that has recently taken place on the Island Sumbawa, which has been furnished to us from the most respectable authority, and which may be received as an historical fact of undoubted authenticity.

BESUKIE, April 16.

"The mountain that has been kicking up this dust, is not in Lumbojan, as was generally supposed, but one in the rear of Bangowangee, and in the district of Bondowoso, about 55 paals distant from this place, called Goonong Rawoong. It has been volcanic from time immemorial, sometimes smoking, and once or twice has emitted flames: seven months ago, four hillocks that were near the edge of the crater, fell in and choaked up the vent. Its first re-opening was about the 4th instant, at which time we had a slight shower of ashes: however, on the 10th, it broke out with louder explosions than was ever before witnessed: we were enveloped in darkness from 4 o'clock P. M. of the 11th—until 2 P. M. of the 12th. The ground here is covered with ashes two inches deep, the same at Probolingo, and at Panaroukan; and through the Bangewangee Districts, from 8 to 10 inches. The sea was much agitated at the time of these explosions, and on a sudden rose from 5 to 7 feet in the night of the 10th.

Extract of a private letter.

On going to shore at Moressa, I found the face of the country completely covered to the depth of an inch and a quarter; great fears were entertained for the crop of paddy that was on the ground, the young plants being completely beaten down and covered by it. The fish in the ponds at Moressa were killed and floating on the surface, and many small birds lying dead on the ground. It took several days to clear the ship of the ashes; when mixed with water, they formed a tenacious mud, difficult to be washed off; my Chronometer stopped, owing, I imagine, to some particles of dust having penetrated into it.

On the morning of the 15th, weighed from Macassar with a very light wind, and on the 18th made the Island of Sumbawa; on approaching the coast, passed through great quantities of pumice stone floating on the sea, which at first had the appearance of shoals, so much so, that I hove to and sent a boat to examine one, which at the distance of less than a mile I took for a dry sand bank, upwards of 3 miles in length, with black rocks upon several parts of it, concluding it to have been thrown up during the eruption—it proved to be a complete mass of pumice floating on the sea, some inches in depth with great numbers of large trunks of trees and logs among it, that appeared to be burnt and shivered as if blasted by lightning.—The boat had much difficulty in pulling through it, and until we got into the entrance of Bimarbay, the sea was literally covered with shoals of pumice and floating timber.

On the 19th, arrived in Bima bay; in coming to anchor, grounded on the bank of Bima town, shoaling suddenly from 6 fathoms; as the tide was rising, hove off again without any difficulty or damage. The shores of the bay had a most dreary appearance, being entirely covered with ashes, even up to the summit of the mountains—the perpendicular depth of the ashes, as measured in the vicinity of Bima town, I found to be three inches and three quarters.

From the accounts given me by the residents of Bima, it appears that the eruption proceeded from the Tomboro mountain, situated about 40 miles to the westward of Bima, On the night of the 11th, the explosion he represents as most terrific, and compared them to a heavy mortar fired close to his ear.

The wind was still during the whole time, but the sea uncommonly agitated; the waves rolled in upon the shore and filled the lower part of the houses a foot deep; every prow and boat was forced from the anchorage and driven on shore, several large prows are now lying a considerable distance above high water mark.

On the 22d, the Dispatch country ship arrived in the bay from Amboyna—this vessel had mistaken a bay called Dannu Sanjier bay for Bima, and had gone into it: her boat was on shore at Sanjier, the Raja of which place informed the officer, that the greater part of the town and a number of the people had been destroyed by the eruption; that the whole country was entirely desolate and the crop destroyed. The town of Sanjier is situated about 4 or 5 leagues to the S. E. of Tomboro mountain; the officer found great difficulty in landing in the bay, a considerable distance from the shore being completely filled up with pumice stones, ashes and logs of timber; the horses appeared beaten down and covered with ashes.

In passing at the distance of about six miles from Tomboro mountain, the summit was not visible, being enveloped in clouds of smoke and ashes, the sides smoking in several places, apparently from lava which had flowed down it, not being cooled; several streams have reached the sea; a very considerable one to the N. N. W. of the mountain, the course of which was plainly discernable, both from the black color of the lava contrasted with the ashes on each side of it, and the smoke which arose from every part of it. The Tomboro mountain in a direct line from Macassar, is about 217 nautical miles distant.

THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE.

SATURDAY, MARCH 23, 1816.

The Office of the Pittsburgh Gazette is removed to Front Street, opposite the Post-Office.

We are informed, by a letter from Harrisburgh, of the 12th inst. that the bill incorporating the city of Pittsburgh, passed both houses on that day—and only wants the signature of the governor, to become a law. The bill respecting a poor-house and a horse market, as also that respecting mechanic's liens in the county, have been postponed until next session, in consequence of the press of business, and the early day fixed for the adjournment of the legislature. The bill granting to Messrs. Stewart & Reed, linen manufacturers, $5000, has been negatived in the senate, after having passed the house of representatives.—A new supplement to the election law has also been passed, designating more particularly the qualification of electors, and the bill respecting the improvement of the navigation of the Monongahela river, by means of dams and locks, was under discussion, and will probably pass.—Some of the members from this district, think it should be postponed until next session, in order to give the inhabitants interested, an opportunity of investigating the propriety of the subject. The bill for the better observance of the sabbath-day, has been indefinitely postponed in senate.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Late arrivals at Boston and N. York, have furnished a mass of interesting European intelligence; part of which we have extracted for this day's paper. It appears by the French accounts, that the greatest tranquility prevails in that country, and that such energetic measures are pursuing by the present government, as eventually to destroy every vestige of that infernal jacobinism, which has caused such numerous evils in that unhappy country. An act of amnesty has finally passed, which excepts all those who voted for the execution of Louis XVI. as well as those who joined Bonaparte in his late usurpation. The former are sentenced to perpetual exile, and the latter, to be seized, tried and punished, according to the nature of their crimes. We confess we have not a particle of sensibility, for these men. Having held them in utter abhorrence in their days of prosperity, it cannot be expected, that we should grieve for their reverse of fortune—they are now receiving the like measure to that which, for many years, they had meted out to others: and in this, we discover nothing but the retributive justice of Divine Providence.

HONOUR TO VALOUR.

The citizens of Philadelphia, have presented a SILVER URN, to Captain Jacob Jones, as a testimony of the high sense entertained of the skill and gallantry displayed by that officer, in the capture of the British sloop of war Frolic, by the American sloop Wasp, under his command.

Mr Pinkney, a Representative in Congress, from Baltimore, has declined accepting the appointment of Minister Plenipotentiary and Envoy Extraordinary, from this government to the court of Russia.

A Paris paper of Jan. 15, announces, that Monsieur Hyde de Neuville, member of the Chamber of Deputies, is appointed Minister Plenipotentiary to the United States.

In the House of Representatives of the United States, the bill to change the mode of compensating the members of Congress, has passed. Yeas 81, nays 67. This bill fixes the compensation at 3000 dollars to the Speaker, and 1500 dollars to each Member per session.

NOMINATION OF ELECTORS.

The Democratic Members of the Legislature have put the following persons in nomination for Electors of President and Vice President, to be supported at the electoral election in November next.

Paul Cox, John Geyer, John Conard, Daniel Busser, William Brooks, Isaac Anderson, Matthew Roberts, John Mohler, John Harrison, Jacob Hostetter, John Rhea, William Gilleland, Michael Fackenthall, James Wilson, Gabriel Heister, James Meloy, James Banks, Robert Clark, Abiel Fellows, David Merchand, Thomas Patterson, Joseph Huston, Samuel Scott, James Alexander, David Mitchell.

The bill providing for the erection of two Arsenals, one at Meadville and one at Harrisburgh, has passed both branches of the Legislature.

FROM THE LONDON TIMES, JANUARY 8.

AMERICAN FINANCES.—It has happened in America, as in many other parts of the world, that the plans of her wisest and best statesmen, after having been for years overborne by the clamours of ignorance and faction, have made their way, by dint of the testimony of experience, to universal approbation, and have even been taken up and recommended by some who were in the outset their bitterest enemies. The great luminary of political science in America, was the late Alexander Hamilton, one of the Secretaries of State, under President Washington. This gentleman first proposed a National Bank, and supported his project by a powerful display of those talents which he so eminently possessed; but he was opposed by his brother Secretary, Mr Jefferson, on the ground that such an establishment was unconstitutional!—We are glad to find that these unmeaning abstractions—worse than unmeaning when set in opposition to practical utility and plain common sense, are now abandoned, even by the gentleman brought up in Mr. Jefferson's own school, and that a measure recommended by the authority of its first proposer, and still more by that necessity which late events have rendered so conspicuous, is likely to be carried into beneficial effect. Whenever a National Bank is established in the United States, it will be a proud tribute to the memory of a statesman whose value was not fully appreciated by his countrymen, until they had to deplore his loss

THE SCHEDIASM—No 5.

I COINCIDE with S. in the opinion, that we may profit by freedom of discussion and remark, whenever our sentiments are variant, and I thank him for his ingenious and judicious comments upon the ideas advanced by me in my last number: since he admits that the young ladies will derive advantage from composing, I will dispense with debating; a concession the more readily made on my part, in consideration of a certain natural talent, aptitude or propensity to this exercise, which is said to distinguish the female kind.

Whatever I may think generally of modern beau, I am happy to say, I know my respectable associate to be so far exempt from the prevailing vanity and ambition of his sex, that he frequently sits whole hours in the ladies company, where with the utmost composure and unconcern, he suffers his prating brethren to engross the conversation, and consequently the ladies attention. Let me not be understood to insinuate that he takes no notice or is indifferent to what passes; that would be unjust, for he has an observing eye and retentive memory; which are essential for one engaged as he is in addressing the public.

I hope it will not be inferred from my having limited my animadversions to a single foible, that I am blind to many others equally worthy of public notice; I assure the reader, I intend to bring them all into consideration in future essays. Since I perused the story of the unfortunate B. my mind has been occupied in projecting schemes for his relief, and restoration to former rank, and the topic I now choose to bring forward, is suggested by feelings of commisseration for the perplexities of this poor young man. It is evident that this disgusted and retiring friend has had unprofitable advisers, or he would not now be standing a distant, sighing, envious spectator of scenes in which he once bore a conspicuous part Being apprehensive that any thing I might offer on this subject, would have less weight as coming from a female, I substitute the following letter, which I solicited from a correspondent—a very grave and discreet gentleman, as will be perceived.

"It seems your rival has carried off the prize for which you sighed and sought so anxiously; and thus you are left alone and disquieted for want of that familiar acquaintance with novels and poetry, which he has acquired with great intenseness of study and application. I perceive you despise silly novels, and silly novel-readers, and that you do not value yourself upon the mere superficial, and exterior accomplishments, which seem to be the extent of ambition in fops, and coxcombs: thus far I commend, but I fear your prejudices go to an unwarrantable length, by rejecting all novels indiscriminately. I think a little cool deliberation would cure your unfounded antipathy, for there are books under the title of novels and romances, which nothing but the greatest extreme of prejudice can condemn. But even if you cannot be brought to appreciate so highly as I do, the intrinsic merit of the best novels, there are certainly extrinsic considerations which cannot fail to call your attention to them. Perhaps the lessons you might draw from this source, would not exactly accord with the more practical wisdom I aim to inculcate, but nevertheless I maintain, that you will profit by a little wholesome learning on the subject of love-dramas; especially those tragi-com scenes where soft and moving speeches produce crying, shrieking, fainting, and all at last end in some elopement or other lamentable catastrophe; and even though you are predetermined neither to approbate nor imitate, it will still give you pleasure to learn from authentic records, what heroes have atchieved, and heroines approved. It would not be amiss to read a few such books, if it were only to know the better why you disapprove, and how to express and display to advantage, the grounds of your disapprobation. But you have been repulsed and discomfitted—how can you retrieve your success and your standing?

If you esteem your fortune desperate with the lady, who has preferred your rival, you must forthwith examine the nature of the love you bear her, and if you find, (as you doubtless will) it is of that convenient and enviable description, which dissipates before the first new flame that rises, you must swear most roundly, and most honestly too, that you only sported—that she was a fool to think you in earnest; and after discharging the artillery of your indignation upon her in such volleys as she deserves, quit her and try another. Having discovered that you have not abilities to captivate, you must now resolve to conquer, and as the foundation of all hope, as the only earnest of success, I recommend in this new enterprize, patient trial and persevering effort.—When one expedient fails, cast about for another: "if she respect not words, win her with gifts."

"Dumb jewels often, in their silent kind
"More than quick words, do move a woman's mind."

Had Shakespeare's counsel been addressed to a more grave and dignified personage, he would not have omitted the special notice and recommendation of those magic lures, which in these days, are used with such talismanic efficacy and effect, under the denomination of gooddies and goose-quills. I strongly recommend to you never to go without a pocket full of these articles.

But if you are determined to love and resolved not to be disappointed, why not profit by the world's wisdom, and as the merchant substitutes paper to specie, so may you substitute imaginary, to real honours: on this plan, you are simply to take it for granted, that your ravished heart is replaced by the ravishers—by a mere effort of faith, you are to conceit all you wish to be assured of, and imagine all you desire to realize. There is an expedient which exceeds even Shakespears—a rare expedient, by which, without incurring the least hazard of repulse or reproach, you may enjoy all the transports, and realize by anticipation, all the superlative delights of successful suit, and a long life of conjugal bliss I hope I am not wasting words upon an unreflecting genius. I trust you scarcely need be apprized from me, how scrupulously you are to bear in mind, that the hopeful project above suggested is the extreme resort of lovers, and furnishes no ground for modest, doubting persons to build their hopes upon—Though the crown of joy here offered, is a real, substantial fabric, upon a good foundation too, yet if the wearer becomes curious and stoops to enquire, it tumbles to the ground. Yours sincerely, &c.

B's. COUNSELLOR.

Mr. B.

To the above letter I have only to add, that I think the patience and perseverance of those rare suitors, who persist in spite of every repulse, and their extreme good nature, who will not take No! for an answer, ought to be celebrated in song and drama, and their glorious atchievments transmitted to posterity. No one is more attentive to the interests of beau's and belle's than I.

TO THE PUBLIC.

THE Subscribers have the pleasure to inform the public, that the drawing of the GRAND STATE LOTTERY will positively commence on Monday the 22d day of April next, and will be continued regularly to its close—that the scheme of the present class is considered much superior to either of the former ones, inasmuch as there is little more than one blank to a prize—a circumstance unprecedented; and in consequence of which the whole Lottery, or nearly so, would have been now sold—but for the uncertainty of drawing—owing to the indisposition of the Manager—this cause of delay happily no longer exists—and the day is fixed—from which no deviation has ever been made in the State Lottery. Tickets, therefore, must have rapid sale, and the price increased in proportion to their scarcity. At present whole Tickets may be had at eleven dollars—shares in proportion.

On the 1st day of March, Tickets will be $11 50, and on the first Monday in April, at $12.—Of this the public are respectfully apprised, that clubs and individuals may supply themselves at the lowest rate, which they can now do at any of the following offices:

February 27, 1815.

DOCTOR CHISHOLM'S
Anti-Bilious Pills,

Of a quality superior to any thing of the kind ever offered as a GENERAL MEDICINE, in this Country.

NOW prepared from a recipe of the celebrated Dr. Chisholm, who, from a long residence in the West-India Islands, has been enabled to favor the world with the most complete history, and most approved methods of curing all the BILIOUS DISEASES of those warm climates.

This extraordinary Medicine, which now for the first time is finding its way into general practice, has properties in the highest degree superior to the mercurial nostrums so frequently recommended by the name of Anti-Bilious Pills. The extraordinary powers of this medicine as a solvent and evacuent of Bile, is without example; never producing debility or injuring the health, in the smallest degree, of the most delicate child or weakly female:

The BILIOUS HEAD-ACHE, so much complained of in this country, and in the neighbourhood of rivers, is often removed by a single dose, which, to a strong man, is only five pills, and to a weakly woman, three. The same dose will generally remove the most excruciating pains of the cholic, like a charm, by abusing the bile to pass downwards in the course of an hour or two.

Two or three Pills taken an hour before dinner, and repeated every third day, will effectually remove those diseases arising from flatulency and indigestion, and by persevering in the use of them for a considerable time, the appetite will be improved, and strength and vigor will return.

Two Pills taken at bed time, with a cup of penny-royal tea, and repeated every second night, will effectually remove Rheumatic pains wherever seated.

A single Pill, taken every fourth hour with a cup of flaxseed tea, will cure Pleurisy, promote expectoration, and relieve coughs and colds.

In CONSUMPTIVE CASES and DISEASES OF THE LIVER, no medicine ever yet discovered, has been known to perform such cures. Two Pills taken every third morning, will be found sufficient, unless costiveness prevails; in which case the dose may be increased according to the strength or constituton.

The Dysentery, Croup, and Summer Complaint on children, are soon relieved by a few doses. A single Pill to a child of 6 years old, and the dose increased according to their strength and age.

In Asthmatic or Phthisical cases, where the laborious breathing and great oppression, with faintings, are fast sinking the patient to the brink of the grave, a few Pills, taking one every hour, with fennel or pepper-mint tea, will often enable the patient to walk about in a few hours.
